- As far as the group participation the instruction was confusing. It would be helpful if the instructor went over a few examples, explained what was expected, then split the class into groups.
- Did not help much or answer questions well. Disrespectful at times.
- Good Instructor overall, but it was difficult at times to comprehend the information being taught if students had a question. Overall though, a good instructor and did good with offering help often in the zoom meetings.
- Great teacher! He helped me so much and always asked if we needed help. Wish we had more time for our course.
- I feel that due to his somewhat this accent, he was hesitant to talk to us as much as we would have liked him.
- N/A
- Not to say this wrongly but English was hard to understand. Along with I never received emails back. Zoom he wasn't really there unless he was called
- The Instructor will get right into work and would teach everything well. Another thing is that Pandit will help those who need help and answer many questions as possible. Overall Pandit is a great instructor in which teaches and brings positivity into the many different zoom calls.
- The instructor took the time to ensure his students understood the content.
- Very helpful and engaging. understanding the course material was made easier for me because of his patience in explaining the concepts.
- Well, the weekly "in-class: worksheets were not social distancing friendly. They included activities that you had to be near people for, such as drawing one part of a model and another person drawing another part. I also didnt like how we had to draw graphs on a word document. Mr. Pandit seemed quite knowledgable on economics and was helpful if you ever had a question however, once we would break out into breakout rooms he would come into your breakout room and sit there awkwardly until someone asked a question or answered his question about the multiple choice part of the worksheet, which was slightly annoying because some of the topics I feel weren't too complicated and people just wanted to get their work done.

- I felt that this class was a burden each week. I did not learn more and this professor is particularly bad.
- N/A
- Really helpful.
- The course should have more assignments.
- The course was well formatted, although a better structure for the zoom meetings would have been helpful. Specifically when split into breakout rooms it was never the same people I had worked with previously and therefore was unable to have a singular group to refer to throughout the semester. If breakout rooms were assigned and maintained throughout the entire semester it would be very beneficial to future students.
- The learning area was helpful. I learned a lot from it. The class time in group needs adjustment. Explanations in the group class should be implemented.
- The zoom is not needed maybe to separate the R but not the zoom for it considering we were taught things from Jeffery Wednesdays
- This course was a bit difficult but the instructor helped into making it a bit more understandable.
